Character

A light and fruity white wine with intense fragrances of citrus, pear and grassy notes. On the palate, these aromas are joined by further peppery and minty dimensions and an intense freshness. The fruit is supported on a full and supple structure, rounded off with a pleasing finish.

Producer

Weingut Stadt Krets

The town of Krets is situated in a basin at an altitude of approx. 220 metres above sea level. The vineyards feature two types of soil: gneisses are ideal for Riesling, while loess soils give the Grüner Veltliner its flavour and structure. Two climate zones come together at this point: in the west an oceanic climate with mild winters and moderately warm summers, in the east a pannonic climate with very cold winters and dry summers. This results in stark temperature differences between day and night within a confined space, balanced out by the Danube. These extremes define the vegetation, providing the perfect basis for fruity wines with an intense bouquet.
